From video download and streaming service to cloud-based acceleration services to blockchain, Shenzhen-based and NASDAQ-listed Xunlei has been reinventing itself since its founding in 2003. The company has recently completed a high-level personnel change with Xiaomi's co-founder Wang Chuan taking over the helm—Xiaomi is one of Xunlei's investors.

The new step for the company is blockchain and here it has launched two blockchain services this May: ThunderChain and StellarCloud. At TechCrunch Hangzhou ThunderChain's chief engineer Lai Xin gave her view on why and how companies can transform themselves for the blockchain era.
