Like the Internet several decades earlier, the potential for blockchain is vast. Some experts have pointed out that 90% of blockchain projects are still being carried out in laboratories instead of practical situations. However, as what Xunlei CEO Lei Chen said at a recent public form, developments to the technology are happening at an unprecedented speed and 2018 or 2019 will be the Golden Age for blockchain maturation.

Since its inception last month, Xunlei's million-TPS blockchain ThunderChain has seen a number of developers and startups drawn to its open platform for applications across industries. This article offers three transformative examples being developed on ThunderChain in tackling various issues globally.
