Following the deployment of ThunderChain's leading technology in more than 490 medical facilities in Thailand in August, it will be used in empowering Thailand's education sector, as Naresuan University and ThunderChain reached an agreement on developing Certory, a blockchain-based academic certificate verification platform, for the academic association in Thailand.

Certory will provide a blockchain-based, open and trustworthy platform for the verification of academic certificates for universities and students in Thailand, leveraging ThunderChain's performance and security benefits as well as its expertise in blockchain deployment. The platform is designed to address academic record database and certificate verification platform issues facing Thailand's education system.
